Courtesy to One's Guests.
Mrs. Nulch was mingling with her guests, extending a greeting here and there. A meek little man caught her eye.
"It was so good of you to come," she exclaimed, grasping his hand. "I'm awfully glad to see you."
"Thank you, ma'am," blushed the little man.
"You're Mr. de Cash, are you not?"
"No'm," confessed the victim; "I'm the collector for the laundry."—Pall Mall Gazette.

DEPUTIES PATROL TOWN OF TURNER

Turner, Ore., April 3.—With three prominent citizens of Turner in the hospital suffering from knife wounds and one member of the city council under arrest, the little city of Turner today was patrolled by deputy sheriffs from Salem to prevent further outbreaks.

Robert Hunsaker, with a deep knife wound in his abdomen, is in a serious condition. James Kelly and Martin Nicely also sustained severe cuts during a free-for-all battle between members of the city council and members of the Turner brass band late Saturday night.

Councilman Leo Jeans was released from jail at Salem last night on $500 bonds. His big, blood-stained pocket knife is held as evidence and a charge will be filed against him as soon as the outcome of Hunsaker's injuries is ascertained.

Saturday night's battle in the tent of a carnival company was the outgrowth of a two-year feud, which originally started between "wets" and "drys." The same factions aligned against each other later on the question of installing a municipal water system. When the "wets," favoring the water plant, won, every "dry" in the city refused to put the water in his house. The school board refused to put the water in the schools.

The carnival company, backed by the Turner band, came to town Saturday. The city recorder demanded a license fee. The bandmen thought it should not be paid. After some controversy, Mayor Thomas and all the city officials Saturday night tried to place the manager of the carnival company under arrest. The bandmen resisted. A fight resulted.

Councilman Jeans declared several attacked him at the same time and he wielded his trusty pocket knife in self-defense. Sheriff Esch came from Salem and arrested Jeans, sending the injured men to the hospital.

Mayor Thomas remained in his home today, fearing to venture on the streets. Yesterday the rival factions held separate meetings and appointed several of their number as "peace officers" to patrol the streets. Deputy sheriffs prevented several clashes between these peace (?) officers.

The bloodshed has intensified the antagonism and more trouble was feared this morning. The carnival company evacuated Turner yesterday. The bitterness has spread to the schools, and children today played in two groups.

Hawthorne's Wife.
In one of the essays in his "Vanishing Roads" Richard Le Gallienne tells the following:
One wintry afternoon in Salem Hawthorne returned home earlier than usual from the custom house. With pale lips he said to his wife, "I am turned out of office," to which she—God bless her!—cheerily replied: "Very well! Now you can write your book," and immediately set about lighting his study fire and generally making things comfortable for his work. The book was "The Scarlet Letter."
